Citizenship Status - Yes, No?

Citizenship Status... An Explanation

In recent months there has been a growing weight of evidence that significant number of newcomers to Canada, especially from other Commonwealth countries, are uncertain about their status in relation to the following terms — Canadian citizen, British subject and landed immigrant.

Let us look at each of these, in turn, and attempt to clarify the relationship that exists between them.

Canadian Citizen

With the exception of children born in Canada after December 31st, 1946 of foreign diplomats and a restricted class of their employees, every child born in Canada is a natural born Canadian.

Every person who became a British subject by naturalization in Canada before January 1st, 1947 is a Canadian citizen.

Every British subject who had Canadian domicile on January 1st, 1947 is a Canadian citizen.

Every woman who married a Canadian and took up permanent residence in Canada before 1947 is a Canadian citizen.

Every child born outside Canada before 1947 of a Canadian father, unless he was born before 1926 and never came to Canada for permanent residence before 1947, is a natural born Canadian.

Every child born outside Canada since December 31st, 1946, whose father was a Canadian, is a natural born Canadian provided his father chose to register his birth within two years as required under the Canadian Citizenship Act. (This period can be extended by the Minister).

The above applies in all cases unless British subject status was lost before January 1st, 1947 or Canadian citizenship was lost on or after that date. British subject status could be lost by women on marriage to aliens before 1947 or by voluntary and formal acquisition of citizenship in a foreign country.

Canadian citizenship is lost by voluntary and formal acquisition of citizenship in any other country, including other Commonwealth countries, or in certain circumstances by lengthy residence abroad.

British Subject

All Canadians are British subjects, but the reverse is not true. Non-Canadian British subjects are those persons who are citizens of other Commonwealth countries which have been recognized by Canada in the First Schedule of the Canadian Citizenship Act.

As previously indicated certain British subjects by naturalization or residence automatically became Canadian citizens on January 1st, 1947 when the Canadian Citizenship Act came into effect. Since that time no British subject can automatically acquire Canadian citizenship.

Landed Immigrant

A landed immigrant is any person who is not a Canadian citizen and who has been legally admitted to Canada for permanent residence. When an individual is granted status his passport is so stamped, he is given a card of identity and a permanent record of his admission is filed in Ottawa. This merely establishes that he has been legally admitted to the country.

As a landed immigrant he is entirely free to establish himself permanently in Canada, to own property and otherwise to enjoy the fruits of his labours. He may leave Canada for visits abroad and will be re-admitted without hindrance, providing (a) his absences are established as being of a temporary nature, and (b) while out of Canada, he has not committed any act which would make him an undesirable person under the Immigration Act.

It is important to note, however, that a landed immigrant is not a Canadian citizen as a result of being legally admitted.

Acquisition of Canadian Citizenship

A non-Canadian who wishes to become a Canadian should inquire about citizenship through the Clerk of the Court in the judicial district in Canada where he lives or through the Clerk of one of the Departmental Courts of Canadian Citizenship established in Moncton, Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, Kitchener, St. Catharines, London, Windsor, Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver.

If he lives more than fifty miles from a Court he may mail an application to the Registrar of Canadian Citizenship, Ottawa, Ontario. The Registrar will arrange to have the application processed through an appropriate Court. When an application is filed it must be posted for three months. After that period has elapsed the applicant is called before Court for a hearing.

(The Act provides British subjects with the privilege of applying direct to the Minister through the Registrar of Canadian Citizenship. Their applications are processed and citizenship certificates mailed to them direct, except when the Minister exercises the prerogative given to him under the Act and directs an individual to a Court for a hearing because of any doubt as to qualifications.)

At the Court hearing the applicant must personally appear and satisfy the Court as follows:

(a) He must be over 21 or married to a Canadian;

(b) He must have had physical residence for the entire year preceding his application (brief absences for holiday or business reasons are allowed).

(c) He must have acquired Canadian domicile (Landed Immigrants who are wives of Canadians and persons who have served outside Canada in the Canadian Armed Forces are exempted from the five year domiciliary requirements);

(d) He must be of good character;

(e) He must have an adequate knowledge of English or French. (This requirement is waived for applicants who have lived continuously in Canada for twenty years);

(f) He must have an adequate knowledge of the responsibilities and privileges of Canadian citizenship.

(g) He must intend to reside permanently in Canada and comply with the Oath of Allegiance.

After the hearing the Court may reject, defer or recommend an applicant:

(a) If rejected by the Court the Minister has no authority to reverse the Court's decision, but the applicant has the right to re-apply two years later.

(b) If deferred by the Court (this should never exceed two years) the Court will advise the applicant when to reappear.

(c) If recommended by the Court the Minister may then grant, defer or reject the application. When citizenship is granted a certificate is prepared and sent to the Court for formal and ceremonial presentations to the applicant, at which time he is required to subscribe to the Oath of Allegiance and when this is done his citizenship becomes effective as and from that date.

"Mrs. Santa Claus" To Visit Edmonton

Many of us are busy preparing for Christmas and buying presents for our children, relatives and friends whom we love dearly. This is a once-a-year effort for most of us.

On December 3rd, Edmonton will be honoured by a visit from Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, the National Director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada. She is a person who has dedicated her whole life to giving help, spreading cheer and easing the suffering of the destitute children and adults in the famine stricken and war torn countries of the Far East—Korea, India, etc.

She has just returned from her annual tour of the children's homes, training centres and food and clothing depots supported by the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada. These are made possible by the voluntary donations and volunteer services of hundreds of warm-hearted Canadians.

The Edmonton branch of the USC is planning a coffee party for Dr. Hitschmanova at the Memorial Hall (Canadian Legion) on Saturday morning, December 3rd, from 9-12 a.m. at which time she wishes personally to thank the many volunteers in the Edmonton area for their support, and show a film of her recent tour of duty.

All are welcome. Do plan to attend—you will be thrilled by this woman who spends each day of the year spreading real Christmas joy.

This is a paid announcement

Norway's Glaciers Melting Fast

Glaciologist Olav Liestol, of the Norwegian Polar Institute, recently stated that if glacial melting continues at the same rate as it has in the past thirty years, all glaciers in Norway will likely have vanished within the next hundred years, including the huge Jostedalbreen.

Measurements show that all snow stored up from precipitation during the winters 1964, 1965 and 1966 melted away last summer. The tips of most glaciers in Norway are receding well over 65 feet a year.

Spitsbergen's Natthorstbreen has shrunk more than 320 feet this year. Over the past thirty years, glaciers have at some points receded up to nearly two miles, with a vertical melting of 320 feet at the foot of Jostedalbreen, by far the largest glacier in Norway.

Norway's glaciers reached their largest extent toward the end of the 1740s. From 1750 on, the climate turned milder and glaciers began to recede. Since the 1930s, the melting has been enormous.

Norwegian Opera Star To Visit Edmonton

Odd Wannebo, described as one of the world's greatest living bassos will present a concert in Edmonton, Monday, November 21 at 8 p.m. at Mount Zion Lutheran Church, 11533-135 Street.

Born in Namsos, Norway, he was discovered and patronized by Kirsten Flagstad. He studied in Vienna under the largest scholarship Norway has ever given an artist. Odd Wannebo has become well-known in Europe for his performances in opera, the concert stage, radio, TV and the recording field.

His programme on November 21st will include classical religious music from Handel, Mendelssohn, Bach and Grieg, as well as a number of folk songs and spirituals.

Wannebo is known for his warm personality and stage presence, which combined with his rich, full-dimensional voice, ensures the listener a most enjoyable musical experience. Please phone 455-3638 for ticket reservations.

Also dentist Bjorn Amsrud finished his long hike from Lindesnes to Nordkapp, a distance of some 1,675 miles, in 96 days. Keeping away from highways, he walked through meadows and across mountains.

Six Months Old Sandwiches — And Still Fresh . . .

Denmark's famed "smorrebrod" or open sandwiches, are to be sold by completely new methods now. A Danish exporter, in collaboration with Messrs. Delecia of Vejle, has developed a successful method of freezing this attractive food item.

The smorrebrod is placed on a tray that can contain four pieces. They are covered with PVC foil, called Resinite, which seals the tray completely so the sandwiches can preserve their consistency.

When deep-frozen, the sandwiches retain their freshness for at least six months, permitting export to practically anywhere in the world.

For the last year the deep-freeze smorrebrod has been sent out on trial, and consumed at exhibitions and embassy receptions. The results were highly satisfactory. During this trial period it was also possible to reach agreement with customs officials on the tariff rates for the sandwiches, which will when deep-frozen be given a set tariff and the classification of an industrial product.

Initial plans are to sell the smorrebrod, produced in a luxury and standard finish, to restaurants and canteens.

CO-OPERATIVE PRINCIPLES (Co-operative Bulletin)

Since the days of the Rochdale pioneers the basic concepts under which they operated have successfully withstood the test of time and changing conditions with very minor modification. The last reformulation of co-operative principles was the Paris Congress in 1937, and these have been unchanged up to the present.

At the Bournemouth Congress in 1963 a Commission was set up to study once again the question of co-operative principles. This move was considered necessary when the changing role of co-operatives is considered. This Commission was charged with the responsibility of reporting to the 23rd Congress of the I.C.A. which was held in Vienna in September, 1966.

The basic problems may appear to be the same — in short to keep the Co-operative movement up to date but to take into account that the International Co-operative Alliance is now world wide with many facets of the co-operative movement now represented in its membership.

It is now recognized that the co-operative movement can play an important part in the economic life of many countries, whether they be prosperous countries with a solid base of industrial development or whether they be emerging nations, financially insecure and in need of outside assistance. Important changes have taken place in the last few years, in technology and in management. Since we seem to be on the threshold of a new industrial revolution it is important that the co-operative movement make a positive contribution to the welfare of people generally in an expanding economy.

It is recognized that new patterns are essential for the future and this becomes increasingly important when the needs of newly developing countries are considered. Co-operatives must realize that involvement in public policy and in other sectors of the economy than their own is inevitable, and they would be mistaken to wish it otherwise.

that typographical error

The typographical error is a slippery thing and sly;

You can hunt it till you're dizzy, but it somehow will get by.

Till the forms are off the presses it is strange how still it keeps;

It shrinks into a corner, and it never stirs or peeps.

That typographical error, too small for human eyes,

Till the ink is on the paper, when it grows to mountain size.

The boss, he stares with horror, then he grabs his hair and groans;

The copyreader drops his head upon his hands and moans—

The remainder of this issue may be clean as clean can be,

But that typographical error is the only thing you see.

Machine Able To Produce Jumbo Plastic Pipes

The world's first machine able to produce jumbo size reinforced plastic pipe by a continual process is jumbo size itself. Measuring five by eight metres in size, it is the result of a process first developed by a young Danish engineer and inventor, Ulrik Poulsen, and completed by engineer T. Debess of the firm Drostholm Products, which now makes and markets the machine.

Poulsen, who has several other inventions to his credit, including another machine able to produce very large dimension pipes in thermoplastics by a continual process. This machine is also in production at Drostholm Products.

The young Danish engineer lives in a house on the outskirts of Copenhagen that is very nearly as romantic as his job of professional inventor. It is an old water-mill, now the property of the Danish National Museum, and in the past has been used for many different purposes—even as part of the Royal Danish Mint.

Refashioning conventional production processes is Poulsen's specialty, and the principle he developed for producing large size plain or reinforced plastic pipe by continual process is a further development of the (now out-dated) system of building such pipes on a form.

Earlier systems of making large scale plastic reinforced pipes could only produce short lengths that had to be welded together to make a pipeline. The Drostholm machine can if necessary be perched on the deck of a ship so that an underwater pipeline can be made and laid in the one process.

The machine can also be used to make large size plastic containers. Drostholm Products has developed a production unit that can turn out five 3,000 litre tanks per hour, with a staff of ten. The unit first makes a 1150 mm pipe, which is cut in 3 metre lengths after which bottoms are inserted.

A machine of many uses, the Drostholm pipe maker can produce round, oval or multi-sided pipes that can have up to 12 different layers of reinforcement material wound on them.

The heart of the pipe-making machine is the hardening boom, and it is here the Drostholm machine differs mainly from earlier methods of making plastic pipe. Reinforced pipe was formerly wound on a boom, and impregnated with the required type of plastic. After this, the boom and pipe material were hardened, the boom was then withdrawn and a start could be made on the next pipe section.

In the Drostholm machine, the boom on which the pipe is made is replaced by a rotating boom on which reinforcement is wound. The boom is divided into sections along its length, and each segment is governed individually. At any given moment, 85 per cent of the boom is moved slowly forward, while 15 per cent is being withdrawn at high speed, so the pipe can move forward, and it leaves the boom after completing its hardening process in the machine. To alter the size of the pipe being made, it is only necessary to change the moving boom segments.

Social Security Court Proposed

The Norwegian Government has proposed establishment of an independent Social Security Court. It would act as a joint appeal board for personal complaints about administration of the National Security Act that goes into force Jan. 1, 1967.

According to the bill, due to be considered at the coming Parliament session, the Court would also hear complaints about social security schemes not as yet covered by the Act, such as obligatory health insurance and supplementary pension plans, as well as disputes under the Act on Pension and Social Security Contributions. There would be no fee for hearing complaints. Moreover, it is assumed that the jurisdiction of the Court will eventually be extended to supplementary municipal as well as private pension programs.

Danish Organ To Oxford

A Danish-built organ has been taken into use in the English university town of Oxford. One of the University's many colleges, Queens, has ordered the organ for the beautiful 18th Century college chapel, as a replacement for an older instrument.

The new organ, built by Th. Frobenius & Co., in Kongens Lyngby, has 22 stops arranged according to the classic pattern, a rare feature in England where the patterns used in the Romantic period have been retained.

The organ's facade has been designed by Danish organ architect Finn Ditlevsen.

Honour For Wegner

What Chippendale is to England, Hans J. Wegner is becoming for Denmark. Furniture designer Wegner is noted for the many chairs he has designed, and his models are made in large number. Wegner furniture is exported to most countries in the world.

Wegner is today one of the most prominent Danish furniture designers, and has become a "classic" designer to the extent that others have started to write books about him and his products. Denmark's biggest publishing house, Gyldendal, has published a book titled 'Wegner—a Danish Furniture Artist,' and presents the designer and his furniture in text and pictures. An English summary has been included in the volume.

The occasion for publication of the book was to mark, in 1965, the 25th anniversary of Wegner's collaboration with Johannes Hansens Cabinet-making Workshop. This close collaboration continues, although Wegner continues to supply designs to five other Danish furniture factories.

Another honour has been given Wegner by the Copenhagen Cabinet-makers' Guild. Guild members include most of the Danish cabinet-makers who began to collaborate with architects and built up the foundation for the reputation now enjoyed by Danish furniture. The Guild has awarded Wegner its Jubilee Prize for 1965.

Address: Johannes Hansens Mobelsnedkeri, Gladsaxevej 311, Gladsaxe, Copenhagen.

Thousands Of Seamen Participate In Games 1966

Thousands of Norwegian merchant seamen on the Seven Seas and in ports at home and abroad are actively participating in the third Neptune Games (Neptuniaden). Organized every second year by the Norwegian Government Seamen's Service, in cooperation with the Norwegian Broadcasting Corporation — NRK — and Norway's Sea Rescue Society, the maritime games combine sports competitions with a number of other point-scoring ship-board contests. The 1966 Neptune Games, opened at Grimstad, Norway, June 19, will last through October 31.

Ship and Shore Events

Reports received by the Seamen's Service in Oslo indicate that the participation, interest and ingenuity shown by seamen are at least as great as in the 1964 Games. At the end of the fifth week, M/S "Wilstrader" took over the lead with 87 points for 6 arrangement days. M/S "Bandak", which had been top scorer during the initial four weeks, was second with 77 points for 8 arrangement days. T S "Wildura", was credited with 63 points for 6 arrangement days and jumped from 12th to 3rd place.

In U.S.A., many seamen use the facilities of Red Hook Stadium to earn points in the Neptune Games 1966. They take tests for the Swimming Badge and also show their skill in a variety of other sports, including track and field. No fewer than 72 ship teams compete in the New York Soccer Series 1966, which is part of the Norwegian Maritime Soccer Series. As of Aug. 18, M/S "Corneville", Oslo, and M/S "Baie Comeau", Bergen, were first and second in the New York Series. The day before, no fewer than 8 Norwegian ship teams played at Red Hook to vie for honors in this soccer series.

The third Neptune Games were officially opened by Vice Admiral Aimar Sorensen, commander-in-chief of the Norwegian Navy, in the presence of Crown Prince Harald. Among the guests were Commerce and Shipping Minister Kare Willoch, plus representatives of seamen's and sports organizations. The 4-day opening festivities at Grimstad were inaugurated with the arrival of an armada comprising the two school training ships "Chr. Radich" and "Sorlandet", plus two sea rescue cruisers and four Norwegian Navy motor torpedo boats, escorted by some five hundred small boats.

According to the program, the purpose of the Neptune Games is to create enjoyment and pleasure for seamen on ships and on shore. The games are not intended to be a bitter and tense competition to win at any price. Ship teams can earn points by organizing and participating in various arrangements. These include all kinds of sports, from track and swimming to weight-lifting and rifle shooting; exercises in ship safety; shipboard entertainment, such as music, singing, movies, recitation and sketches; a variety of shipboard tournaments, from deck golf and tennis to chess and bridge; submission of photographs showing arrangements in connection with the Neptune Games; and publication of ship news bulletins; sightseeing tours; and other arrangements. Detailed reports sent to the Norwegian Government Seamen's Service, will be judged by a 3-member jury.

Freja Handball Club Holds Annual Meeting

The general meeting of the Freja Handball Club was held on September 27, 1966 at the Scandinavian Centre. Attendance was greatly improved over last year's meeting. The following officers were elected:

President: Mr. Wallace McMorris. Vice-President: Mr. Bendt Nielsen. Secretary: Mrs. Kirsten Andersen. Treasurer: Mrs. Lillian Jorgensen. Fifth-man: Mr. John Fisher.

Winter training is in full swing every Tuesday from 8:00 to 10:00 p.m. at Strathcona Composite High School. New players are urged to join, this is one place where experience is not necessary. The Association winter tournaments will start at the end of October, and Freja is hoping for a first place. Come out and join us, be part of this great sport.

Come and enjoy yourselves at the Scandinavian Centre on November 4, 1966 when we will be having our biggest dance of the year. We hope to fill the Viking Room to the last chair. See you all there.

For further information concerning either our Handball Club or the dance, phone 489-3627.

On Books . . .

Land Under the Pole Star, by Helge Ingstad. Translated from the Norwegian by Naomi Walford. — Famed explorer describes a 2,500 nautical mile voyage that he and his wife made in 1953 to learn more of the Norse settlements founded by Eirik the Red in Greenland about 1000 A.D. Woven into this account are the sagas of the Norsemen who colonized Greenland, remained there for some 500 years, and then vanished mysteriously. Conclusions drawn from the Greenland expeditions, this time to North America. In 1964, he discovered and excavated, on the northern tip of Newfoundland, a pre-Columbian settlement of Norse origin, which has been carbon-dated to 1000 A.D.

Published by St. Martin's Press, New York, N.Y. ($10.00).

Be Fit for Life, by Kaare Rodahl, M.D. A practical guide to physical well-being by a leading Norwegian authority on physical medicine. Drawings by Dorothy Robinson. The author, who was director of research at Lankenau Hospital, Philadelphia, Pa., from 1957 to 1965, and now heads the Institute for Work Physiology at Oslo, Norway, presents a sensible and easy-to-follow guide for men and women who can devote only a few minutes a day to physical exercise. Shows how capacity for work and play can be increased through a program of moderate exercise, coupled with a common-sense approach to diet and rest.

Harper & Row, Publishers. ($5.95).
